

Greetings from the George Washington University:

On behalf of the AT&T Center for Indigenous Politics and Policy (CIPP), I am writing to ask you to encourage college and graduate students who are interested in policy to apply for the Native American Political Leadership Program (NAPLP) for Spring 2018.

NAPLP is a full scholarship program for American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian undergraduate and graduate students to study applied politics at the George Washington University in Washington DC. As part of the Semester in Washington Politics program, NAPLP is funded by a generous gift from AT&T. The scholarship covers up to nine credits in tuition, on-campus housing, round-trip air travel, and a stipend for books ($250) and living expenses ($2,400 in two installments). Students also have the opportunity to have an internship in places such as a congressional office, national tribal organization, or a federal agency, and to develop lasting connections with a cohort of Native American students from across the country.

CIPP is the George Washington University-based center whose purpose is to research, educate, and promote public awareness on issues of significance to Indigenous communities. In the GW spirit of scholarship and service, we hope that students who participate in NAPLP return to their schools and communities with fresh perspectives, knowledge, and skills about the political process and community organizing, and that they feel better prepared to give back to and take a leadership role in their communities.

Students may apply online at www.naplp.gwu.edu. Applications are due November 1, 2017. Please contact the NAPLP office at 202-994-3284 or at naplp@gwu.edu with any questions you may have.

My best wishes and many thanks,

Wendy Helgemo
